Zonta International and the United Nations have been linked closely for many years. But what has shark conservation got to do with this?

Amanda Elizabeth, Convenor of UNAOWA's Environment Committee is keen to share her passion about this subject and particularly to encourage worldwide awareness and action to protect our environment.

The environment is one of the most important pieces in the jigsaw of life. Zonta's programs and projects, supporting women and children, focus on this aspect when working closely with our United Nations' partners.

With a Degree in Marine Science from Murdoch and a Masters in Marine Biological Science from UWA, Amanda is well qualified to speak about environmental issues in the context of the UN Sustainable Development Goals.

Our Club is keen to promote science for girls as part of ZI's focus on the future. What better role model could we have than Amanda who also fits with our October UN Theme!
